Bali is perhaps the most famous island in the Indonesian archipelago. You’ll find gorgeous stretches of sand along its coasts, majestic mountains, centuries-old temples, lively festivals with unique arts and crafts and friendly people who keep their vibrant traditions alive. Discover the best of what Indonesia has to offer on this “Island of the Gods”.

With a diverse choice of wonderful resorts, Bali has collected top accolades, such as “world-favourite island destination”, from popular travel publications. Bali hotels are known to be some of the most hospitable in the world, owing largely to the Balinese culture of warmth and hospitality. The island’s amazing landscapes, rolling surf, pristine beaches and an incredible cultural experience make for a fantastic holiday destination.

Bali has two seasons, wet (between October and April) and dry (between May and September), with an average year-round temperature of 31°C. The wet season brings rain and overcast days, with the most precipitation occurring between December and February. From June to August is the windy and traditional kite season in Bali. The central highlands are typically cooler than the coasts.

Best time to go: May to August, when humidity levels are low with cool breezes day and night.

There are three ways to get out of the airport and to your hotel: your hotel’s transfer service, the Ngurah Rai Airport Taxi and a metered taxi outside the airport grounds.

The first choice is the most convenient—make sure that your booking includes a transfer service and pickup details. Be aware that Ngurah Rai Airport Taxi has a monopoly over the airport transfers service and thus can be over-priced compared to standard taxi meter fees. The last choice requires you to put in more effort—walking with your baggage out of the airport grounds and flagging down a cab to pay by the meter. Go for the first option whenever possible.

Mobile phone calls are relatively cheap in Indonesia. SIM cards are widely available by major national cellular operators, namely Telkomsel, Indosat, XL, AXIS, Smart Telecom, and Hutchison Telecommunications or Tri “3”, with the first four numbers, identifying the operator.

The bemo (‘becak-mobil’ or motor-cab) is Bali’s main public transportation, and it is the most economical way to cover distances between and among Denpasar and the regional terminals in Gilimanuk, Singaraja, Amlapura and Gianyar. Full-sized buses and larger minibuses cover longer routes from the same stations as the bemos. There are no fixed fares, so it’s best to ask fellow passengers how much they pay and follow suit. But remember to pay while still on board to prevent them driving off with your change. It is normal to be charged extra for ‘excessive luggage’.

Metered taxis in the main southern tourist areas abound, crawling along main streets beeping at tourists. Always stick to the meters. Several hotels also provide complimentary shuttle services to specific areas, so plan your day and make good use of the service.

BALI AREA GUIDES

“Bali’s surf and beaches have been the main magnets of visitors to the island, where sun, sand and surf make for a perfect combination. Excellent surf spots can be found around the southern Bukit Peninsula, while the island’s north and easterly beaches are better for snorkelling and diving. Into the heartland, areas such as Ubud and Kintamani offer blends of nature and unique cultural experiences. The island’s rich history can also be found in the provincial capital, Denpasar…”

1. KUTA
Kuta, located in southern Bali, was a sleepy fishing village half a century ago, but it has expanded since the 1960s after its long sandy beach was discovered by travellers from Asia and wandering surfers from nearby Australia. Ever since, it has perhaps become the best-known tourist resort area on the island. These days, Kuta is quite busy and packed with varied accommodation from five-star hotels to budget hostels. Cheap bars and clubs make it a party centre, while local and international restaurants offer great dining. Kuta also has shopping aplenty, from the chic beachfront ‘Discovery Shopping Mall’ and Kuta Square.

2. NUSA DUA
Nusa Dua would normally refer to the tourism enclave on the south-eastern side of the Bukit Peninsula. The enclave is a host of luxury hotels, and home to a popular golf course, an up-market shopping complex and the major convention centre on the island. However most refer to the whole area east of the peninsula as Nusa Dua, spanning the Tanjung Benoa water sport-filled outcrop to the golden beaches and seaweed farms of Geger and Sawangan. Though it’s the most developed and modern area in Bali, it still houses many temples, a museum, and lots of other attractions.

3. SANUR
Similar to Nusa Dua, Sanur is a coastal stretch of beach on the southeast of the island, but more of a quieter little town than a tourism enclave. The northern part of Sanur beach was the historical landing site for invasion troops during the Dutch intervention in Bali in 1906. During World War II, Sanur was again the entry point through which the Japanese forces landed to occupy the island of Bali. Sanur today is also dotted with a number of classic hotels and resorts such as the Grand Bali Beach and the Bali Hyatt, and has become known as a popular tourist destination for repeat guests.

4. UBUD
Ubud is Bali’s tourism playground in the heartland. Located among rice paddies and steep ravines in the central foothills of the Gianyar regency, it is one of Bali’s major arts and cultural centres that has developed a large tourism industry. Tourism on the island developed after the arrival of Walter Spies, a Russian-born German who taught painting and music. Spies and foreign painters Willem Hofker and Rudolf Bonnet entertained celebrities including Charlie Chaplin, Noel Coward, Barbara Hutton, HG Wells and Vicki Baum. They brought in some of the greatest artists from all over Bali to teach and train the Balinese in arts.

5. CANDIDASA
Candidasa is a popular tourist stopover, and is often considered a far-flung, but still easily accessible, quiet retreat in the island’s east. The once traditional fishing village teemed with life in the 12th century, and is best known for its lagoon temple, with its original name being Cilidasa or “ten children”, paying tribute to the temple figurines there depicting a group of children surrounding the Hindu mother goddess of Hariti. The idyllic setting and superb snorkelling and diving options in the bay, as well as its accessibility, has led to Candidasa becoming a favourite retreat destination.

6. DENPASAR
The island’s provincial capital city boasts a rich historical background. It was conquered by the Dutch during their intervention in 1906. The royal palace was ransacked, facing fierce suicidal retaliation by the court and its people, known as the Puputan rite, remembered through a statue in today’s “Taman Puputan” central civic square. The traditional market of Badung is the best place to witness the island’s vast collection of curios and wares, from artwork, pottery, and silverware to textiles and traditional cotton batik cloths. Museum Bali, next to the Jagatnatha temple.

WHAT TO EAT IN BALI

 Thousands of islands with different cultures make up Indonesia, so no wonder its food is just as diverse. To complement the holiday experience on Bali, you would not want to miss out on its assortment of dishes. These include lawar, bebek betutu, the Balinese sate version known as sate lilit, and the island’s famed Babi guling. The Balinese have a rich collection of snacks, cakes and desserts for your sweet tooth too!

1. SATE VARIETIES
   Sate (or “satay”) are marinated, skewered and grilled meats, served with spicy sauce, and may consist of diced or sliced chicken, goat, mutton, beef, pork, fish, tofu, eggs or minced blends. Bali’s own variant is sate lilit, made from minced beef, chicken, fish, pork, or even turtle meat, which is then mixed with coconut, coconut milk, and a rich blend of vegetables and spices. Wrapped rather than skewered around bamboo, sugar cane or lemongrass sticks then grilled, sate lilit can be enjoyed with or without sauce.

2. NASI AYAM AND NASI CAMPUR
   Bali’s own take on ‘chicken rice’, nasi ayam and nasi campur can be found served at many warungs (small eateries) and restaurants throughout the island. The dish is mainly white rice served with many different elements of Balinese delights, from a bit of babi buling or betutu as the main meats, together with mixed vegetables and a dab of the iconic spicy hot sambal matah – sometimes served with a bowl of soup. For those who do not want it too spicy, simply ask for it without the sambal.

3. BEBEK AND AYAM BETUTU
   Betutu is an iconic Balinese favourite, consisting of a whole chicken or duck stuffed with traditional spices, wrapped in banana leaves, then enveloped tight in banana trunk bark before it’s baked or buried in a coal fire for 6 to 7 hours. The result is a rich and juicy, succulent feast with all meat easily separated from bones. Betutu is the Balinese slow-cooked luscious equivalent of babi guling for ‘non-pork eaters’.

4. BABI GULING
   Babi guling is an all-time favourite, consisting of spit-roast pig stuffed with rich traditional spices and vegetable mixes such as cassava leaves, slowly ‘rolled’ over (hence its name, guling means ‘to roll’) a coal fire. The crisp brown skins are prized, while the meat is a tender and juicy treat. At first the dish was a communal treat only during special festivities and ceremonies, but now babi guling can be found widely served at warungs and restaurants specialising in this dish.

5. JIMBARAN SEAFOOD
   The line-up of beachside cafés on Muaya beach in Jimbaran Bay typically serves grilled fresh caught seafood, ranging from shrimp, clams, crabs, calamari, lobsters and a wide assortment of fish. But in terms of taste, the secret lies in each of the café owner’s recipes of barbecue sauce and condiments – usually in the form of homemade sambal, which has collectively become known as “sambal seafood – Jimbaran style”. From sweet-sour blends to the typical hot and spicy... tasting is believing!

6. PEPES AND TUM
   Pepes is an Indonesian Sundanese cooking method using banana-leaf as food wrappings. The small package is sewed with thin bamboo sticks at both ends, and either steam-cooked, boiled or grilled. It is most commonly used to prepare fish as “pepes ikan” or meat, chicken, tofu or vegetables. Tum takes on a different form, with the wrapping folded and stitched at one top end, and usually steam-cooked. The banana-leaf wrapping provides a special aromatic appeal to the cooked blend.

7. LAWAR
   Lawar is a traditional mix containing fine chopped meat, vegetables, grated coconut and spices. Sometimes, and in some areas, lawar is prepared using fresh blood mixed with the meat and spices to strengthen the flavour. Lawar are usually served immediately after preparation as it cannot be kept long. There are two main types of lawar, white and red. The white version usually does not contain any meats or blood.

8. TRADITIONAL DESSERTS & CAKES
   Traditional cakes are collectively referred to as Jajanan Pasar (traditional market cakes), originally used to accompany ceremonial offerings, but now have found their way to the markets as daily coffee time favourites. The varieties abound, but the ingredients usually include rice flour, glutinous rice, sugar, coconut and tropical fruits. Wajik, pancong, jaja batun bedil, bubuh injin, godoh, pisang rai, and kelepon are typical varieties.

WHERE TO SHOP

“Bali caters to a wide range of shoppers, as it is a treasure trove of fine art and handicrafts, antique and semi-antique furniture, paintings, delicately carved jewellery, wood and stone carvings, masks, woven and dyed fabrics. It is where international and world-famous designer brands can be found beside local and handmade curios.”

1. UBUD ART MARKET
   The Ubud Art Market is located opposite the Puri Saren Royal Ubud Palace and is open daily. Here you can find beautiful silk scarves, lightweight shirts, handmade woven bags, baskets or hats; statues, kites and many other hand-crafted goods. Most of the goods are made in the neighbouring villages of Pengosekan, Tegallalang, Payangan and Peliatan. The location of the Ubud Art Market which is centred among the art producing villages, and being just opposite the royal palace which is a centre point to Ubud itself. Read More...

2. MONKEY FOREST ROAD
   Jalan Monkey Forest, Ubud. Ubud’s Monkey Forest, is a famous landmark in central Ubud, and its one-way thoroughfare caters well to visitors with good quality restaurants, cafes, bars, hotels, homestays and shopping venues. Along the street you may easily find international brand stores, sophisticated shops selling local designs, beautiful painting stores and handicraft and antiques outlets on each side of the street. Bali — Everything You Need to Know

SWIM SAFELY
Enjoy the sea, sun and surf... just don’t swim near the red flags. Red flags with skull and crossbones planted in the sand designate dangerous rip current lurking in an area. If you do get caught in a strong rip, calmly float or tread water to conserve energy as swimming against one is always futile. Eventually the rip will subside, then swim at a leisurely pace, in a diagonal direction toward the shore. Another way to keep safe in the waves is to keep near the Balawista lifeguard watch towers.

CHANGE YOUR CASH WISELY
Use only authorised money changers or a bank. Banking hours are from 8:00-15:00, Monday to Friday, and until 13:00 on Saturdays. Some bank branches in hotels keep longer hours. Money can also be changed at hotel cashiers, at a higher rate than authorised money changers. Daily exchange rates are published in newspapers. Stay away from small, unauthorised street booths, even though they call themselves “authorised”. You usually end up with less money than what was counted in front of you. If you do happen to be in that situation, concentrate and recount the money twice in front of the talkative guy and ask for any missing banknotes.

KEEP AWAY FROM STRAY DOGS
Stay away from street dogs, no matter how timid they may seem. Rabies has been present in Bali and several deaths arising from rabies infections have been recorded. Visitors to the island should avoid contact with dogs, cats, monkeys and other animals. If bitten, seek immediate medical attention. It’s better not to feed the monkeys. Usually their feeding is taken care of, and if they’re in their natural habitat, why feed them anyway?

ENJOY THE SUN, BUT DON’T OVERDO IT
Slap on plenty of high-factor sun protection (minimum SPF 30) and drink lots of fluids. Find out about the many local remedies for sunburn, which would also give you an insight into the traditional jamu culture, as well as natural spa treatments.

SHOW RESPECT AT TEMPLES
Always follow respectful dress codes and conduct when visiting sacred places in Bali. Some of the rules you may encounter include: Walk around a flower offering placed on the ground, not over it; always wear a sarong and a waist sash when visiting temples (an udeng headdress for men shows even more respect); and ladies cannot enter sacred places during their period.

BARGAIN WHENEVER POSSIBLE
If there’s no barcode or set price, start negotiating. Bargaining is customary at small shops and markets; start at about half the asking price and go up till a compromise is reached. Refrain from buying anything on your first day in Bali. Do a little survey while you’re enjoying your first day and get accustomed with the prices, and don’t be tempted to buy anything on the beaches as prices can be triple the norm, and their quality isn’t as assured. Bringing home, or even wearing, fake Oakleys or knock-off Rolexes is no fun.

BE SAFE ON THE STREETS
The traffic in Bali can be quite a chaotic scene for first time travellers. Traffic jams have become quite common in recent years in the more crowded southern parts of the island due to population growth and not so top-notch urban planning. Zebra crossings aren’t really safe places to get to the other side, and there is no such thing as “jay-walking” here. You might be tempted to rent your own motorcycle, but it is not recommended, as getting acquainted with a scooter is one thing while attaining special skills to zip through the traffic is another. Not to mention, legal issues.

BEWARE OF “BALI BELLY”
While part of the cultural experience has a lot to do with the food, trying out traditional Balinese cuisine for the first time can be exciting and daunting. Most of the traditional food is exotically spicy, and those prepared by communities during local ceremonies may be far from restaurant hygiene standards. The common phrase, “Bali belly” has stuck for a reason. The spices in the traditional preparations can serve as antibacterial agents, and an upset stomach or diarrhoea after eating freshly prepared lawar mix or satay lilit may simply be because you are unaccustomed to the strong spices.
